

For awhile, I cancelled my phone service (using only my cell phone), because of the number of unwanted telemarketing calls I was getting on my land line. With the Wisconsin no-call list, it is finally worthwhile for me to have telephone service again. What right do companies have to invade my privacy and the peace of my household to try to sell me something I don't want? If I want their product, I'll find them.